DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-45 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

As per claim 1, it would appear that it is impossible for an opaque layer to have light actually propagate through it since this would contradict the definition of being opaque.

This also applies to claims 36 and 44.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 44-45 are directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 44-45 are rejected as being non-statutory since the claimed "computer readable medium" may be interpreted, in light of the applicants specification (e.g. See [0028] and [0037]) as corresponding to a signal, per se. Signals are representative of subject matter that is non-statutory.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

Art Unit: 2121

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 17-45 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by [TWEAKNEWS] – Computer Monitor and Displays Reviews, wherein a Nathan Glentworth reviews a Samsung Syncmaster 151B 15 Inch TFT Monitor (hereinafter: Glentworth).

As best understood, it appears that claim 17 claims a device comprising:

- a housing;
- a lighting component; and
- a translucent layer, wherein light propagates through the layer based on a lighting scheme associated with a condition in the computing system.

This claim is so broad that it is anticipated by a LCD (liquid crystal display) screen of a computing device being utilized to produce an image on the screen of the LCD, during operation of a computing system (i.e. a computer to which the LCD is attached).

An LCD display screen has a housing that contains the components (lighting components; the liquid crystals) that produce the actual images appearing on the screen, whereby a translucent layer (a layer that allows light to pass through it) is manufactured as an integral part of the display so as to ensure protection of the liquid crystals. The display will present images based on the operations of the computing system, that is, if a processor is instructed to present an image, the processor presents image information to an appropriate circuit means which then instructs the LCD to produce the image on the display screen.

Glentworth describes an LCD monitor presenting an image by using a Samsung Syncmaster 151B 15 Inch TFT Monitor, which was publicly known on or before May 3rd, 2002, as evidenced an article reviewing it on that date (e.g. See Computer Monitor and Display Reviews article, wherein the Samsung Syncmaster 151B 15 Inch TFT Monitor is shown and described, wherein the monitor is used for presenting images derived a computing system).

Claims 18-35 are rejected by virtue of being rejected by claim 17.

As per claim 36, the method appears to be adequately anticipated by using an LCD to display an image on the screen of the LCD, wherein the housing is considered the entire structure itself, and does not merely represent a specific material of the LCD.

Claims 37-44 are rejected virtue of being rejected by claim 18.

As per claim 44, this claim is rejected using the rational as already set forth above, with respect to claims 17 and 36, and those rejected are also applied herein.
